

absent minder from Invores Systems is a new and better way for businesses to proactively record and keep track of unscheduled employee absences.

absent minder doesn't replace your current time clock or record keeping system, instead it complements and completes the automation process of those systems.

Think about what happens at your company today when an employee calls in sick, takes an unscheduled personal or vacation day or has a death in the family.

If you are like most other companies, your employees are probably calling a special phone number and talking to someone to give their name and notify of the absence, or they're leaving that same information in a voicemail for a person to transcribe later. In both cases, someone is manually entering the absence information into your ERP or Labor Management System.

In fact, it's not at all unusual for businesses that run 7x24 hour operations to have at least five people spend part of their time manually updating Employee Management Systems with absence information.

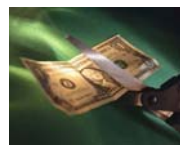

absent minder is a completely automated solution that employees can call. When they do, they are asked to say their name and ID number. Then they are asked for the reason for today's absence.

It's just like talking to a person. Employees will be able to simply state the reason for their absence, such as "Sick Day" or "unscheduled Personal Day" or "Death in the Family". The system notes the reason and informs the employee that the system has been updated with their call.

A complete list of the absences for the day is immediately available, through password protection, from a browser. Supervisors can proactively check the status of their staff lists on demand. At a glance they'll be able to see who called in, what time they called and the reason for the absence. The list can be printed or downloaded into an Excel spreadsheet.

absent minder can also be customized to automatically update your existing ERP or Labor Management System through an easy to use API.

Even if your company is using as few as two employees spending part of their time answering calls and updating absence records, you will achieve a compelling ROI with absent minder.

Since it can be implemented on your site or as a subscription service, absent minder is easy to implement and doesn't require any expensive or special hardware to be installed.

Contact Invores today for more information and pricing. No pressure, no hassle.

